RESEARCH INTERESTS

Computer Science Theory Education

I am interested in discovering and alleviating barriers to success in computer science theory courses. I'm curious about the factors that influence sense of belonging, self-efficacy, and impostor syndrome in computer science theory. My goal with this research is to inform interventions that can support student learning.

Algorithm Design

I am interested in reductions and the application of subroutines as building blocks for a larger algorithm. Formulating problems in ways that make existing subroutines useful opens up new ways to design efficient algorithms while simultaneously simplifying the analysis to achieve good theoretical bounds and experimental performance.

RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Student Help-seeking Behaviors in Algorithms Courses

Sep 2025 – Present

Advisor: Prof. Michael Shindler

Phenomenographic analysis of 22 transcripts to understand student experiences with help-seeking in algorithms courses, identifying trends with help-seeking behavior and resource selection to make algorithms education more accessible and equitable.

Resisting Humanity's Mechanization in Fahrenheit 451

Apr 2023 – Jun 2023

Advisor: Dr. Katherine Raymond Walsh

Independent literary analysis project on Fahrenheit 451 examining how society's over-reliance on technology and aversion to critical thinking leads to a dystopian future.
